

Threnody Harris - Fact Sheet

You have a reputation as a “soiled dove”--you would rather drink, smoke, and carouse with the loose crowd down at the corner than be prim and upright. After begging you for years to change your ways, your parents finally threw you out. This is fairly disastrous for the 1920's, since a good marriage is now out of the question and many employment opportunities are now closed to you.

You were working as a barmaid in the sleaziest speakeasy in town when you heard that the Count and Countess Von Blucher, newly arrived from the continent, were having trouble hiring help.

The house they have inherited has been abandoned for years, and it has such an evil reputation that even hobos refuse to sleep within its walls. However, even though you've heard many stories about the place over the years, and you believe in ghosts, you're broke, so you applied for the position of maid. They were grateful to take you.

The Von Bluchers haven't yet taken up residence in the house; their first night spent there--and your first day of employment with them--will be celebrated by a housewarming party they're giving for the cream of society.